Collaborative action research is a powerful form of staff development because it is practice to theory rather than theory to practice. Teachers are encouraged to reach their own solutions and conclusions and this is far more attractive and has more impact than being presented with ideals which cannot be attained. (Linda Ross, New South Wales)

Introduction. Collaborative Action Research (CAR) is a core element for working to improve educational and public services and is a core component of a model for improvement for Scotland's Public Services. Sometimes the term 'Collaborative Enquiry' is also used. It uses focused systematic practitioner research to critically examine current arrangements, make changes based on evidence, monitor the impact of these changes and refine and adapt them as appropriate.

Action research is a philosophy and methodology of research generally applied in the social sciences. It seeks transformative change through the simultaneous process of taking action and doing research, which are linked together by critical reflection. Kurt Lewin, then a professor at MIT, first coined the term "action research" in 1944. In his 1946 paper "Action Research and Minority Problems" he described action research as "a comparative research on the conditions and effects of various forms
