In the Cold War climate of the 1950s and 1960s, the threat of communism galvanized public attention. In 1953 Martin Luther King called communism "one of the most important issues of our day" (Papers 6:146). As King rose to prominence he frequently had to defend himself against allegations of being a Communist, though his view that "Communism and Christianity are fundamentally incompatible" did not change (King, Strength, 93).
