When we come to understand all this, the mystery of the human mind becomes clear. The mind is not simply an "emergent property" of a physical brain, with free will and thought only an illusion caused by the collisions and combinations of mindless molecules and electrons. Nor is the mind an immortal and purely immaterial component.

Mysteries of Mind

Science is totally baffled by the fact that every mystery of the physical world points to a mystery beyond. The very existence of mind is with either past or future and never with present, for, in the present remains only existence. The present is indefinable. In reality, both past and future are creations of mind and are not absolute.
