The book follows Nona's journey to the Red Sisters school of assassins. As with any school there are Clicks, betrayals, trials and pranks. Nona's rise through the school is sadly predictable and the book seems to follow a normal coming of age type theme of 'who do I trust?' and 'why do the teachers have it in for me?'

The intro of the book far outweighed the rest, to the point where I almost quit reading. The main issue I had with Red Sister was the jumps in the timeline. Maybe a physical copy doesn't have this problem, but with the way Red Sister was read I had a hard time discerning when Nona was reflecting or if the story was continuing on.
