Ismail Kadare was born in Gjirokastër, an historic Ottoman city of tall stone houses in southern Albania near the border with Greece, to Halit Kadare, a post office employee, and Hatixhe Dobi, a homemaker, and lived there on a narrow street known as "Lunatics' Lane."

Ismail Kadare - Wikipedia

Ismail Kadare has the good judgment to keep his story short and to not load the metaphor with more weight than it will bear. He conveys his central message without beating it into the ground or getting bogged down in detailed comparisons. His storytelling benefits greatly from a light touch and a darkly humorous undercurrent.
