The Same Inside Poem by Anna Swirszczynska - Poem Hunter

In "The Same Inside" the speaker of the poem tells about encountering an old beggar woman on the street while en route to a romantic tryst. Falling into conversation with the needy stranger, the speaker experiences an intense moment of recognition and communion and loses interest in the planned rendezvous. The poem, addressed to the lover with whom the original tryst was to take place, delves into the forces that attract us to others and then maintain our connections with them.
