The Science of Leonardo: Inside the Mind of the Great ...
Leonardo Da Vinci is a most fascinating person to read about. His extremely curious mind, amazing, almost superhuman powers of concentration, and his ability to memorize and synthesize huge amounts of information led to a level of genius in both science and art that has been rarely surpassed.

The Science of Leonardo: Inside the Mind of the Great ...
Leonardo da Vinci's scientific explorations were virtually unknown during his lifetime, despite their extraordinarily wide range. He studied the flight patterns of birds to create some of the first human flying machines; designed military weapons and defenses; studied optics, hydraulics, and the workings of the human circulatory system; and created designs for rebuilding Milan, employing principles still used by city planners today.

Capra makes a compelling case that the science of the future may look a lot more like Leonardo's than Bacon's or Descartes -- a science of systems, non-reductive and akin to an art." --Michael Pollan, author of Botany of Desire and Omnivore's Dilemma"Vivid and compelling. . . .

The Science of Leonardo: Inside the Mind of the Great ...
The central thesis of Fritjof Capra's 'The science of Leonardo' is that Leonardo was the founder of the scientific method rather than Galileo a century later. He has a point, but since Leonardo's notebooks were only recently indexed in full, it is hardly relevant for the actual history of science. More thought provoking is mr.

The Science of Leonardo: Inside the Mind of the Great ...
Thus, Leonardo da Vinci was the first in a lineage of scientists who focused on the patterns interconnecting the basic structures and processes of living systems. Today, this approach to science is called "systemic thinking." This, in my eyes, is the essence of what Leonardo meant by farsi universale.
