This is a famous Beatles song released in 1965. The tune was the band's first track to be performed solo by Paul McCartney, alongside a piano backing track. As you can imagine, the violin mostly takes on McCartney's vocal melody, whereas the piano part stays the same. That said, there are duo violin versions of this duet out there too.

This violin duet uses traditional mountain music and folk influences of the era, and is absolutely gorgeous when paired with the piano. You can slide your fingers on the fingerboard into the notes, rather than placing them directly into position, to give the piece some extra emotive old time country twang.

It would typically be orchestra-accompanied, but I found an arrangement for piano which ends up being more like a duet with the violin. Instead of being a bunch of oom-pa-pas, the piano carries a large part of the melody at times while the violin accompanies. It has a couple of arpeggios and chromatic runs for showing off.
